VOLUME I.

HONOLULU, HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1885.

NO. 67

AFTERWARDS.

(Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.)
There is no vacant chair. The loving seat—A group unbroken—smitten. Who knows how?
One sits there silent only; in his usual seat We gave him once that freedom. Why not now?
Perhaps he is too weary, and needs rest; He needed it too often, nor could we bestow. God gave it, knowing how to do so best.
Which of us would disturb him? Let him be.
There is no vacant chair. If he will take The mood to listen mutely, he is done.
By his least mood we crossed, for which the heart must ache.
Plead not your question! Let him have this one.
Death is a mood of life. It is no whim By which life's giver mocks a broken heart.
Death is life's reticence. Still audible to him.
The husband's voice, happy, speaks on, apart.
There is no vacant chair. To love is still To have. Near to memory than to eye, And dearer yet to anguish than to comfort will.
We hold him by our love, that shall not die.
For while it doth not then he cannot. Try!
Who can put out the motion of the smile?
The old ways of being noble all with him laid by.
Because we love he is. Then trust awhile.

A PROMINENT FIGURE.

The Member for Northampton and the Editor of London "Truth."
[London Cor. Boston Herald.] Labouchere, the member for Northampton, is a good deal in evidence, in parliament, and in his clever, satirical paper, Truth.
He is not unlike Mr. James G. Blaine in appearance. He is about the same height and build, wears his beard, and is somewhat slow in his movements. Mr. Blaine has a square forehead and a larger nose; but there is not much more in his head than is shown away in the Labouchere brain. A well educated and a traveled man, Labouchere has, I dare say, far less earnest views of life than Mr.
Blaine has, is certainly far more indifferent to the opinion of Mrs. Grundy, and possibly the only likeness between them is in the build, height and manner of wearing the beard.

This trifling similarity may, however, help the reader to realize the figure of Labouchere. If he cared a brass farthing, or even less for anything or anybody, Labouchere would have more influence in the house of commons and out of it. Life is to him an amusement. He has plenty of money and plenty of brains. A seat in parliament, a share in The Daily Truth, a paper of his own, a bank, a house in town, a classic home on the Thames, a clever wife, of whom he is really fond, and a baby that is to him a constant surprise; he finds his time well occupied. He has none of the fears of business men; his bread is buttered on both sides; he is rich beyond the dangers of such speculations as he cares to indulge in, and his heart is neither consumed by the fire of patriotism nor the cancer of a lofty ambition.

Some people despise him; he does not care.
Some people admire him; he does not care.
A few friends like him; he does not care.
Still fewer probably love him; he does not care. He is a good story teller. His best anecdotes are against himself. As a financier and a man of business, he is more generous than is generally known; and I have never heard a whisper against his honor as a banker, speculator and man of business. He has a slight drawl in his speech; is a capital talker, a liberal host, and he stands at the extreme end of the extreme political party in the state. His latest radical performance was to propose in the house of commons a motion not in exact terms, but favoring the abolition of the upper house.
In spite of the opposition he pushed the motion to a division, and got 71 votes in its favor.
The result was loudly cheered by his Irish friends and radical colleagues. Some political opponents regard the division as very significant.

Gathering Florida Sponges.
[Florida Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.] One of the sights of the Florida reef is the sponge. He is generally a coach. From Conchochua, Key West, and devotes his whole time to the business of fishing up the reputable objects called sponges. This is done chiefly with hooks or spears, the boats drifting along until a sponge is sighted, when it is hooked or speared and jerked from its stronghold upon the bottom. When the water is too deep for the hooking process the sponge goes overboard and dives to the bottom. The sponges taken from this section are not the delicate toilet sponges, being a different grade and only used for coarse work. They grow to a large size, sometimes measuring three feet across and two high, and when active present anything but an attractive appearance. A good quality sponge looks as it comes to the surface like a great beef's liver, and the odor is spongy—no other word describes it.
When a load of these aromatic flowers of the ocean is secured, they are taken down to Key West, or may be cured on some of the keys. This consists in allowing them to remain in the sun until thoroughly decayed, and then treating them to repeated rinsings, until the animal matter is entirely removed.
They are then placed in the sun to bleach, and in this stage are seen covering the fence in Conchochua. Later they are subjected to several processes, one of which in some cases is sanding. This is more common in the toilet sponges from the Mediterranean.
Shave one and you will find quite a disposition of fine sand escapes. This was not eaten or absorbed by the sponge when alive, as you might suppose, but is a process by which the weight of the sponge is increased, and as they sell by the pound, the object is evident.

The tricks that the guileless sponge dealer is not up to are not worth chronicling. Some time ago a young man was sent to a sponge locality to buy sponges for a firm who was going to manufacture a new article that required large quantities, and it was found that the young man paid as much for water and coral rock as he did for sponges.
Better sponges are found in the Bahamas than on the Florida reef, and the business, though in the hands of a few, is a valuable one. The majority of people have rather peculiar ideas regarding the sponge. Some think it an insect; others a plant. It is, however, a simple animal, composed of many cells, that are arranged in three layers, the middle one secreting the sponge. The cells may be, that goes to form the skeleton of the animal.

THE BEST ROUTE
To the World-Renowned Volcano of Kilauea, Via Punaluu, Hawaii.

THE NEW AND STURGE
Stmr. W. G. Hall (Malulani).
BATES,.....Commander Will leave HONOLULU, HAWAII (stopping at Maunaloa, Maui, Kailua, Kona and Kauai), on the Monday following the arrival of the steamer Mariposa and Alameda from San Francisco, due here the 8th and 2nd of each month. When these dates occur on Monday, the W. G. Hall will leave the same day.
The steamer passes along the entire coast of the leeward side of Hawaii, affording Tourists a panorama of charming scenery, and will stop at Kilauea Bay where sufficient time is allowed to visit the monument of CAPTAIN COOK.
Tourists by this route reach PUNALUU at 5 o'clock P. M., Tuesday—15 hours ahead of any other line of steamers, being only one night on the vessel, and making the entire passage in smooth water.
At PUNALUU there is the finest Hotel on Hawaii, and from here Tourists will be conveyed by Railroad to Pahala, thence by stage coach to Halfway House, where Horses and Guides will be in attendance to convey them to the Volcano.
By this route the entire trip is made in five and a half days, allowing Tourists two nights and one whole day at the Volcano House—and arriving at Honolulu early Sunday morning.
THIS IS THE ONLY TRAVEL ROUTE.
Tickets for the round trip $50, which pays all expenses.
Apply to HARRY ARMITAGE, Agent for the
